CC PDF Converter is a lightweight application that is able to create PDFs from any printable files. The program installs on your computer as a virtual print driver, so you can access all its functions from the “Print” panel. There are several configuration settings for helping you carry out the process effectively, as you can select the page orientation (portrait, landscape or rotated landscape) as well as the page format by picking the page number per sheet. Moreover, you can create PDFs by either maintaining the original colors of the text or opting for a black and white display. CC PDF Converter offers users the possibility of embedding a license into their PDF files, and this task can be accomplished by choosing the license type (creative commons, sampling, public domain) and specifying the license position on the documents, by typing in the values in the dedicated dialogs. Since it's only able to create PDFs using a virtual PDF print driver, CC PDF Converter can be basically used with any third-party editor that supports the print feature. Hence, you can use the app with WordPad, Paint, Office or any other program. You can make CC PDF Converter automatically open the PDF file when the printing is done and create links to the printed URLs. Unfortunately, the program is not able to automatically save the converted files to a specified directory; and you are required to select one and provide a filename each time you create a new PDF. All things considered, CC PDF Converter allows users to create PDF easily and quickly, and it provides good output quality results. Thanks to its overall simplicity, it is suitable for beginners and professionals alike. Q: How to combine 2 PIPELINES in MEAN stack? In MEAN stack I want to use 2 different views of my Page. The first view returns a json and the second an html. I am using handlebars to make the two view. The code for handlebars are as follows: Hello

World! {{{body}}} When I remove the first line in the above code {{{body}}} I get a blank page. If I keep it I am getting the html page. How can I send a response by both of them (in MEAN stack)? A: After 2 hours of searching I could find a solution which worked for me. I added the following code to the server.js file: `app.engine('handlebars', handlebars.engine); app.engine('handlebars', handlebars.engine.merge(__dirname + '/handlebars/handlebars.handlebars'))`; Now when I start the server.js. It first looks for an expression and then appends a.html extension to it. It works fine. GENOME
