It was formed in 2001 as The Law Centre to Prevent Torture, and the name was changed in 2006. The Law Centre to Prevent Torture is run by two directors who are former court interpreters. The charity has funded research into torture and assisted asylum seekers by finding lawyers, and by providing information. The CEO of the charity, Damian Bichard, retired on 15 January 2017. History The charity was founded in 2001 as The Law Centre to Prevent Torture. It received a donation of £1.6 million of a former building from the University of Bristol and moved to Pimlico Road in Westminster in January 2002. The Department of Justice granted it two years' funding, until December 2003, and it was supported by the Home Office. In January 2006 it changed its name to the Law Centre to Prevent Torture. The charity initially provided legal advice to asylum seekers detained at Harmondsworth detention centre in West London, funded by the British Home Office. The Law Centre became involved with the case of Boudali Yengoyan. Yengoyan, a 6d1f23a050
