Passing a function as a parameter in C# I would like to pass function as a parameter in this code: public struct EndFunction { public endPoint endPoint(ref value); } However, the caller will then be able to access any public member of the struct. Is there any other way to do this? A: No, this is explicitly disallowed. [A]ll access to the members of a type is considered "access to the type". [...] This restricts what can be done with respect to a type. For example, the compiler will not let one member be accessed if another member is accessed, even if the other member is public. [access-modifiers] You can use delegate types to achieve what you want. public delegate void EndFunction(ref int value); public struct EndFunction { public

```
EndFunction EndPoint; } public static void Something(EndFunction func) { // do something. } void Test() { int x = 0 6d1f23a050
