This work was published for the first time in 1922. The first two parts followed one after the other in 1935. The third appeared in 1942. The fourth and last part appeared in 1976. The background against which this work was written was different from what it is today. What is meant by the term "background" is a set of previous influences which has gradually assembled together the materials (or instruments) that Aladdin's palace has. The Book of Jazz is written in English. It is the only one who speaks openly of his identity for each of his composing enterprises. He wrote about African-American culture and music, Italian culture and music, Polish culture and music, etc. He answered the question "what it is like" in an artistic way: "Music is an art for my people". He never addressed the question "how it came" or asked "where it came from", and tried to come up with new and different answers to questions which were asked to jazz musicians who composed exclusively for the word's instrument: "Was there a God?" "Have you been to an afterlife?" "Do you pray?" "Were you baptized?" "Did the Holy Ghost come upon you at any time?" etc. Were these questions asked to the creator of The Book of Jazz? No. And were these questions asked to Aladdin? "No." But in the background it's possible to find answers to these questions. He would answer them in other ways and, as a result, he found a way to accommodate the already present elements of his musical inspiration which comes from different sources. We see this particularly in the fact that he started from jazz and popular music and transformed them. One of the goals of this book is to go back to the origins of these jazz compositions. Just as he sought to understand if there was an afterlife, he asked to himself the same question about his own origins. Or maybe he thought if there was no God then he could question Him? Maybe he wanted to know how he would be judged? Maybe he thought of it from the perspective of being a "Jew", having Jewish origins, and whether he was Jewish? "Are you?" "No." "But you're Jewish?" (Jewish people are not limited to one religion) "No." "What are you talking about?" "No." "If you can't be Jewish, then why do you call yourself Jewish?" "I call myself Jewish because I'm Jewish." He tells the questioner that he is not a Jew, so he denies the fact of being Jewish. Yet, he cannot deny, deny, deny. Therefore, he has to wear the label of "Jewishness". He is Jewish and he is aware of it. This is an example of his logic. He also tried to find out where it came from, and found that there are no answers. It's like the origin of the Word from the Word, or the origin of life from life, or the origin of time from time. Where did it come from? Who or what created it? So, we are in a blank. This is a big part of his artistic process.
