
Sudden Strike 2 Map Editor UPD

it's pretty similar to the german game with certain tweaks. there are tanks and planes too in the editor. it's pretty much the same ui as the german game and controls the same. you can't build anything (aside from propaganda posts) or harvest resources. you can set the enemies' missions and ai, along with a lot of other options. all of this is fully expandable and downloadable content is planned for the game. the editors at fireglow have also released the source code for the game. i have spent the majority of my free time crafting these missions and hoping that it's worth the wait for all of you that i expect to play them. i hope you enjoy them as much as i enjoyed making them. i hope that you can immerse yourself in the battles that i have made. currently i only have a modded version of the us campaign available, but i plan on uploading the german and the japanese campaigns as soon as i have them fully edited. keep checking back for more as i work on them. the ai is much more detailed and flexible than in other ww2 games. this involves ordering its units and generally reacting to the situation like a real commander. it can be a pain in the butt to play against, but it can also be a lot of fun. if you're curious to know what the dev team can do with this sort of tech, there is also a sudden strike 3 editor in the works. it will have much wider control over the units, terrain features, and the game's mechanics. put it simply, you can carry weapons and change some attributes of units and buildings. however, you can not just place units and buildings in the scenario editor, you are also able to set the position of trees, ground types, a list of vehicles and so on. since the editor is written in c# with directx, the whole thing runs as native code on windows.
