It's not so useful, because it takes one mouse click. Is there a way to make a bookmarklet that blocks the current browser from a website, for a specified amount of time? A: You could try: javascript:window.open(");javascript:window.close() (I'd test this in a new, empty tab first.) I got this idea from MSNBC anchor Martin Bashir and CNN commentator Sally Kohn aren't the only people playing the blame game. On Monday, new political strategist and Democratic pollster Celinda Lake warned Americans that not only are Republicans going to blame Democrats for the government shutdown, but the GOP will also blame President Barack Obama — and Pelosi and Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, too. "We are going to see a mix of blame," Lake told The Daily Caller. "This is a party-wide problem," she added, as other voices on both sides echoed that sentiment. The dirty GOP trick, Lake said, will be to frame the shutdown as the fault of the White House — and blame the Democratic Party for going along with it. "The president could really easily just go to Nancy Pelosi and say, 'Look, I really want to deal with these issues. Will you work with me on the Senate's version of it?" Lake said. "That would be a big mistake," she said, but "in fairness, the president could say that, and I think it's what he'd love to do." "He doesn't want to
