To showcase the power of Share for Review, Adobe is sharing a case study with the world from Charlie Munger's epic Darth Vader makeup photo. The photo went viral and was featured in the Wall Street Journal, the New York Times and other publications, even reaching No. 5 on Reddit's list of "The Hottest Photo Of All Time." No longer do you have to leave the magical world of Photoshop to collaborate and review with your clients. Along with Share for Review in Photoshop, two new features that take advantage of revolutionary GPU technology and Adobe Sensei AI to create even more powerful image editing are now available in the app. To provide more precision when editing with objects and content on-screen, Photoshop now supports the Radeon FreeSync technology, which synchronizes the refresh rate of an external display to the GPU. This enables the RGB monitor's synchronization to the GPU, and helps the entire app run faster and more smoothly. In addition to the new display refresh rate connection, Photoshop now supports the highest resolution workspace screens found in current gaming hardware and systems. The new 144Hz and 4K display screen resolutions enable even more precise content editing and artwork creation. To further increase speed, the recently retired 3D features in Photoshop have been replaced with native GPU-based rendering solutions. Similar to newly added support for Radeon FreeSync on GPU editing, Photoshop's image and content retrieval and selection, as well as its content layers, now benefit from the GPU for the best possible performance.
