Essentially, is it possible to have (two, in this case) data sources of the same name in the same application, but only install a subset of the code for each of them? A: I'm not sure what you mean by "a data source". You can have two eclipse projects that use the same data sources. If you do not want those projects to be dependent of each other, create a shared project. Example: You create two eclipse projects: Project A Project B Now, you create a shared project (let's call it project C) with only the common code of projects A and B. You can then add the shared project as a dependency to projects A and B. from the IUCN database (version 2.3, 2017 f30f4ceada
