Technical Field The present invention relates to a compact optical system and an imaging device using the same. More particularly, the present invention relates to a compact optical system that has a relatively long back focus and a relatively large angle of view and that is used in an optical apparatus such as a camera, a video camera, a projector, or a camera-equipped cell phone, and an imaging device that uses the compact optical system. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, there have been proposed many optical systems that are compact and have a relatively large angle of view by using a single aspheric lens element, especially an aspheric lens surface formed by grinding a glass lens, so that a large numerical aperture can be obtained. U.S. Pat. No. 7,076,980 discloses an optical system that uses a lens formed by polishing a glass lens by using a lapping machine and by additionally forming a lens surface. Furthermore, U.S. Pat. No. 7,076,980 discloses that a lens formed by polishing by using the lapping machine has an aspheric surface in the center of the lens, and that the lens after being polished has a uniform surface shape. Furthermore, Japanese Patent No. 4,356,311 proposes a method for manufacturing a lens for a microlens that is used in an imaging device such as a color-camera-equipped cell phone by grinding the entire lens surface that is formed into a convex shape by the spherical surface of a glass lens.
