cleaning ice cream from a centrifuge bowl by a stream of clean warm air. Ice cream production is well known and involves one or more stages of freezing, mixing, mixing, beating and churning the product. In a typical ice cream manufacturing process, ice cream is produced by combining a mix of milk solids and dry mix ingredients with a base such as cream, milk, buttermilk, or skimmed milk and then freezing the mix in a chilled freezing vessel. The base mix is mixed during a mixing operation which generally involves heating, homogenizing, and aerating the mix and incorporating air into the mix by whipping, churning, or other mechanical techniques. The ice cream mix is then transferred to a mixing unit where it is mixed for several hours with various types of mix ingredients. The mixed ingredients, which may contain egg albumin, milk, and sugar or other sweeteners, are thoroughly combined with the base mix and, optionally, flavor and colorings in the mixing unit. The mixed ingredients are then transferred to a churning unit where they are churned several hours so that the ingredients are emulsified. During the emulsification operation, air entrapped in the frozen mix is driven out of the mix and the mix is homogenized and extended to form a continuous ice cream mass. The ice cream mass is then transferred to a centrifuge where it is frozen and stored at a desired temperature. After the ice cream product is frozen in the centrifuge, it is then transferred to a storage tank where it is frozen until it is required for sale. When it is required for sale, the ice cream is discharged from the storage tank to a holding tank where it is held for a preselected time in order to allow for freezer cleanout. Following the cleanout, the ice cream is transferred to a display case and allowed to rest therein for a

I need to display a list of Books. Each Book has a read and a write value. Therefore I need to perform a Fetch from a HTML Page. If I perform one fetch using : parsed_json['Books'] I get all the data. But, If I perform : parsed_json['Books'] = parsed_json['Books'] + '1' (in this case a new Book is added to my data) I get only the new Book. Since I have many
