FolderEncrypt works like a backup solution, but allows you to encrypt the files inside your folders. Features: - Scan your file system quickly and easily - Select up to 4 folders at a time - Encrypt individual files, or entire folders - Use a 128-bit, 256-bit or 512-bit AES key and access it through a password - Create a Zip archive to share the encrypted data - Very small program (less than 5.9MB) that doesn't require installation Don't install it on your computer ... or your USB flash drive, to make sure that it's always the most secure option. FolderEncrypt allows you to encrypt multiple folders, it can create Zip archives that can be used to share your files securely, and it doesn't require an installation because it's entirely portable. The whole process starts with selecting the folders you want to encrypt, making sure you want to scan the folders that are encrypted or unencrypted, and then you need to decide on the encryption key type, either 128-bit, 256-bit or 512-bit. The size of the encryption key you decide on will depend on the amount of data you want to protect, because it'll determine how long the password you need to access your data is. It's also possible to select which files you want to encrypt, either manually, or at random. You can use different settings, either in terms of time, and also how often you want to scan the files on a weekly or monthly basis, to make sure that all your files are secured. You also need to add a reminder that it's important to keep your key file safe, because that's the only way you'll be able to access the data you've encrypted. After you're done, you'll get some settings you need to check out, like the destination path, Zip archive creation settings and storage location, and then it's time to click the Encrypt button to get the job done. While encryption is in progress, you can monitor the status using the log, and then you'll get a confirmation message asking you to confirm that you want to use the encryption key. You'll want to take care where you keep your data file, because that's where you' 6a5afdab4c
