The incident happened on Friday last week when the minor had been giving a ride to the accused. "I am transferred. I have been transferred to a lower pay grade. I was a Gazetted officer. I don't want to go into the details," the junior superintendent of police had told an official of the home department. "This thing of rape has set a bad precedent in society. What about the honour of young girls? The law of the jungle is still the law of nature," the victim said. The matter came to light when the victim filed a police complaint on May 10. Meghalaya Home Minister, Abdul Khader Khan said that the state government was creating a sub-divisional police officer for justice in all 35 divisions. Fired up by the arrest of the police official, a mob attacked the police station and set it on fire. Earlier, the state home department had asked the chief secretary to conduct an inquiry into the case. The victim herself had demanded a CBI inquiry. "Any police officer who commits rape in this day and age should be hanged," she had told the media on Friday. According to the IPC section of rape, the accused could be hanged. However, at the time of the incident, the law did not specify the punishment for the offence. The victim has alleged that her father also died because of the attack by the policeman. Dr. Nat Brown sits in the back of his examination room at Lakeview Regional Hospital. He does abortions even though the state says he can't. "I've been practicing since 1973," he said. "We are all ready for the next generation." His license to perform abortions has been approved by the state. But the state health department, under new rules passed by the General Assembly, won't renew the license until Dr. Brown tests negative for HIV.
