Field of the Invention The present invention relates to storage devices which use magnetic tape as a recording medium, and more particularly, to the cooling of a recording/reproducing magnetic head in such a storage device. 2. Description of the Related Art FIG. 11 is a schematic diagram of a general built-in magnetic tape device. The tape device includes a chassis (cover) 50 having a front opening, and a metal cylinder 50a (magnetic tape) disposed within the chassis 50. The chassis 50 is formed by an upper frame 50b that supports an opening 50c in the chassis 50; a lower frame 50d that supports the upper frame 50b; and a front side frame 50e that supports the lower frame 50d. The chassis 50 is provided with a connector 52 for supplying electric power and an interface card 53 for transferring information between the host device and the magnetic tape device. The connector 52 and the interface card 53 are electrically connected through a cable 54. As shown in FIG. 12, the magnetic tape device comprises a chassis 50 formed as described above, and a tape drive unit (magnetic head) 60 that reads information from and writes information to the magnetic tape 52 by way of the magnetic head, which is disposed inside the chassis 50. Although a magnetic head is not shown in the figure, an additional magnetic head for erasure is disposed in a rear portion of the tape drive unit (not shown). On the lower surface of the chassis 50, the tape drive unit 60 is fixed in the lateral direction by a holder 56. The holder 56 is fixed to the chassis 50 at four points with screws 56a, while supporting the tape drive unit 60 in the longitudinal direction by means of guide ribs

In case you are a little bit unfamiliar with the process, .As you may or may not know, I am working on a book about how to be a successful musician. Today I completed the first draft of chapter 9. In my work I found the following quote and it has really stuck with me: "Among the great secrets of success are simplicity and sincerity. They are the essence of Christianity, and they are the end of the doctrine of the Crucified." - Lewis F. "Bud" O'Donnell This quote really struck home for me. It forces me to take a step back and think about what I am doing. Are I doing what is right for my career? Am I pursuing my art as a discipline or am I pursuing my art because it is something I love? What if what I love is not the same as what is right for my career? For the artist who is truly committed to their art, we must first remember that the field of pop-culture and graphic design is a highly competitive field. The sooner we approach it as a career and as a discipline, the sooner we will see the benefits of having a discipline. If you are trying to make a living doing what you love, it is like being a single parent trying to provide for your family. I am not saying to not have a family, but we are talking about having to work full-time and still try to devote time to being creative. If you decide to pursue a career that I have outlined in my book, this can be approached in a few ways. You can go the traditional route and think about being creative full-time. You can approach it as a business and as an art portfolio. Or you can pursue it at a rapid pace but at the cost of having to sacrifice the quality of the end result. If you are a creative person who wants to pursue an artistic career, you should work on and perfect your craft. Also you may need to network and find some mentors and start networking. When I was first starting out, I thought that just because I was good at what I did that it meant I was now a professional. I have learned that we can only 3e33713323
