Wikipedia In a new interview with an Iranian newspaper, the journalist and blogger Masih Alinejad speaks openly about her experiences after being banished from Twitter. In December, I had a Twitter dispute with [conservative US political commentator] Ben Shapiro. It was a normal Twitter dispute. A lot of Americans thought Ben Shapiro was racist and Islamophobic, and I told them the opposite. One of his followers retweeted a #FreeCharlie hashtag on my Twitter page and retweeted it, and I told him to delete it immediately. We had a very normal Twitter dispute. Three hours later, my account was suspended. I received a message from Twitter telling me that I had been suspended for tweeting 'threats of violence.' And, then in January, I was banned from Twitter for six months for 'promoting the boycott, divestment and sanctions (BDS) movement 3da54e8ca3
