The CS4 tutorials are listed on this book's companion Web site, which also has links to a number of other helpful resources for Photoshop newbies. They're great for getting a handle on the basics of Photoshop's features. Sketching in a Digital World The art of sketchnoting, or notes combined with graphics, was pioneered by my old college friend, Justin North. He developed a method of graphic representation that quickly made notes more legible, and he began his own publishing company, KhanAcademy.com, after college. He was the poster child for technology and entrepreneurship at the time, and he filled a niche while making his talent known to the world. Through his company, he convinced Steve Jobs to take one of his lectures on entrepreneurship (and at the time, the entirety of his company's existence) and publish it as a book in 2004. The Art of the Laptop Lecture In 2005, Justin and I happened to be students again, and we had the idea to host a lecture series on Steve Jobs. We recruited some really talented people and started planning lectures, now called the Art of the Laptop Lecture Series. I showed Justin my drawing of Steve during one of our early meetings. He looked at it and told me that he liked it a lot, but he wasn't sure how to turn it into an actual lecture. The lecture was put together by some really talented people, including Jason Nazary, who did the audio and music arrangements, Chad Strickland, who did the screenplay, and Kathryn Gross, who produced the series and created all the graphics. Kathryn and Jason are not just talented — they're incredibly creative. Chad, who was my high school friend, created the speaker notes (basically the graphic representation) and provided the illustrations that I combined with the images from Justin North. The illustrations and graphics we used in the talks allowed people to see the art and design element of the lectures, and the speaker notes were visual aids for the content. Many of the same people were involved with the development of the Art of the Laptop Lecture Series and my lectures on leading and managing. As part of these lectures, we sketchnoted notes, combined them with images, and turned those notes into books and then into Web sites (and occasionally lectures). Sketchnoting is currently the fastest growing trend in technology, and I plan to write a book about this subject in the near future.

Mr. Barroso must be genuinely perplexed. The Polish Prime Minister, Donald Tusk, has given him lots of support, but a scandal of this scale cannot but be surprising. The European Commission was supposed to make big news when it came to personnel change, not the burning of some compromising documents. It is true that Mrs. Malmström's tenure on the Commission seems likely to end up in the dustbin of history. But she had a bright career as a supporter for globalists. Among her shortlisted were the Dutch politician Frans Timmermans, the French politician Margrethe Vestager, the German politician Manfred Weber, the vice president of the European Parliament, Frans Timmermans, and the Italian politician Giuliano Amato. The British Conservative Party candidate, Julia Branson, has also emerged as a strong candidate. Mrs. Malmström showed little interest in party politics. She belonged to a party that merged in a post-communist Union of Christian and Democratic Parties. She was a member of the Green Party, which maintains links to environmental radicalism. More important, Mrs. Malmström represented the party of the Swedish Prime Minister Göran Persson, who made the name of Sweden into one of the strongest globally on behalf of "global governance." Mrs. Malmström had many English clients, and she could thus be a reassuring partner for English business interests. She had previously been a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and New York University's Center for European Policy Studies. She is also considered "one of Europe's most powerful lobbyists." She advocated the old-time globalist concept of "sovereign rights," meaning that no one should interfere in other countries' internal affairs — without even being asked. At the European Court of Justice, she supported the legal principle of "non-discrimination" and the right to legal aid. She supported the just-announced EU doctrine of "polarization" of the world into two blocs — one led by the United States and the other by Europe. One of the most outspoken opponents of Russian President Vladimir Putin in the European Parliament is the Liberal MEP Cecilia Wikström. Mrs. Malmström strongly criticized the Estonian President-elect, Toomas Hendrik Ilves, for his opposition to the attempted coup
