Q: Calling function by clicking link from click event I have a Javascript/JQuery program to create a new User. There's a "add" (visible on the website) link to add a new User. When clicking on this link, the "add new user" Function is called and all the fields are re-populated (by a JS Controller for the Fields I've added). The values of all these fields are then sent to a PHP controller, where they're added to the database. When this is complete, the user is redirected to a page that says: "New User successfully added." The problem is that this page is automatically generated, so I need to have it be created/redirected by the "add" link. What's the best way to have this be done?
