Yes - jonbaer ===== anigbrowl Not really, though I agree with this headline: "The very first digital credit card transaction," Shirky explained, "was a 'thrill' transaction. It was a theft because there was no conversion from theft to cash; there were no fees, no charges, no merchant assumptions of the value of that theft. But here's the thing: People would have _gained_ from that particular theft." A merchant would have the thrill of a successful heist; a customer would have the thrill of dodging a fiscal minefield._ The

"An excellent high fantasy setting" - Re:Jump, PC Games Magazine "An unbelievably good game that can become a favorite for many" - Famitsu Weekly, Review "With fluid action combat and great graphics, this game is the well-deserved winner for RPG of the Year" - gameol.jp, Review "[...] A lot of things that can be found in other RPGs end up being watered down by the developers to be fit for the western audience. ... It's a shame that the games developers have no regard for the people who grew up in America and play these games and that they made the type of game that makes them pout instead of playing a great game. [...] The game is an incredible action RPG that's fun for any type of RPG fan who enjoys action games and fantasy RPG's." - Meganath, PC Gaming World "... The story is interesting. The world has a fascinating history behind it, and the game takes you on a journey through it. It's not as deep as I expected, but the story still has plenty of punch to it." - Canderlark, Come Play The Wilds "... The story and characters are pretty awesome. They're well-written and well-acted, but the battles lack the brutality of other RPG games. Each quest has a good sense of pacing... The gameplay is what really sets it apart. The action combat is fast and fluid, and the tight controls make it easy to whip enemies with successive attacks, so you can keep attacking as long as you want." - GrollnBlum, Lazygamer "This is a great game. It's easy to get into and amazingly fun, but it also has some really good RPG elements that I love.... A lot of times when you're playing ARPGs it feels like you're in a world that you're supposed to have been in for a while. You can tell that there was a lot of work that went into these battles.... An incredibly interesting world full of interesting story and intriguing characters, and the battles are not short of anything. I think that I am really interested in playing this game for a bit longer as I feel like I have barely scratched the surface." - Patorone, RPG Site "A fantastic game that should not be missed. It has some great moments and is a relatively short playthrough. I hope more games based on bff6bb2d33

Comparison between anthropometric and dipstick urine protein criteria for the screening of proteinuria in a general practice setting. This study evaluates the validity of the dipstick test for urine albumin compared to the waist and symphysis-fundus-obstacle (SO(2)) criteria for the screening of proteinuria in the general practice setting. The screening tests were performed on 499 outpatients by their general practitioners. The sensitivity, specificity, positive and negative predictive values, and likelihood ratios for each test were determined and compared. Of the 500 patients, 75 (15%) had positive urine dipsticks; of these, 40 were confirmed as having proteinuria, whereas 35 had no proteinuria. Of the dipstick-negative patients, 31 had proteinuria. Considering the reference test, the dipstick test identified 85% of patients with proteinuria and only 29% of patients with no proteinuria. The SO(2) had a sensitivity of 46%, specificity of 93% and a negative predictive value of 80%. The waist had a sensitivity of 31%, specificity of 97% and a negative predictive value of 77%. The overall sensitivity of the dipstick was 72%, specificity 99%, positive predictive value 82% and negative predictive value 88%. The dipstick test was more useful in detecting microalbuminuria than in detecting macroalbuminuria. The dipstick test identified 85% of patients with proteinuria, whereas the SO(2) test failed to identify 40% of patients. The dipstick test was useful in identifying 84% of patients with macroalbuminuria.
