“Football has become more about slick touches and aerodynamic movements,” said Matt Phippen, FIFA Lead Match Designer. “The game has evolved as football has and we have managed to capture the day-to-day intensity of matches as only real players can.” Anyone who has spent time watching football knows it’s all about speed, accuracy, power and skill. Every player has a unique style of play, and every player takes on a unique role in a game. As the number of players at a football club changes, so too does the way each player plays. In “HyperMotion,” we have captured the complexity of this, using a highly-detailed player model which is drawn directly from the real world, with thousands of hand-crafted animations. Players will demonstrate the variety of movements and styles that they can show off. All players will feel weighty, and important, in their actions. In other words, FIFA 22 will feel like a football match like no other. On the pitch FIFA 22 introduces “HyperMotion Technology.” This will capture real football matches of varying lengths to power the game and capture the intensity and complexity of match as only real players can. This leads to moves like the “Double Chop,” where the player takes out his/her opponent with a spinning back-heel. “Power-Up / Power-Down” – Players now gain power up from attacks, using the “Wrath of the Wind” move. This allows players to create shots which they have never created before! “Vision” – Players now use their “Vision” ability in game, when they follow the ball in a similar way as an actual player. The ability to predict where the ball will go when you make a trick is also now available, helping you make the right decisions with your game. “Skills / Recoveries” – These are now more complex and have rules that reflect real football, including how long the player recovers after a shot, how close the player is to the ball after a
