This week's IRIS Awards will recognise the outstanding achievements of a team of scientists, engineers, mathematicians and students who worked together to overcome a range of challenges, and demonstrate the potential of the IRIS. Awards, which run from 2 November to 8 December, will be presented at two events at The Lord's Taverners Institute at Cambridge and held at the Royal Society at London. The IRIS awards celebrate and reward the outstanding achievements of researchers from all over the world and a number of prizes, including the top award of £10,000, will be presented for the first time in 2016. The prestigious £40,000 annual Adrian Prize, awarded for the best PhD thesis in all areas of astronomy or astrophysics from a UK university, is one of the prizes that will be presented at the IRIS awards ceremony at the Royal Society. The poll led to suggestions for the IRIS prizes. The four new 2016 awards are: School Student Of The Year prize for outstanding academic achievement: in recognition of educational excellence £10,000 top prize for the outstanding achievement and/or originality of research in astronomy, astrophysics or related fields or in science education or teaching. As well as the Adrian Prize, there are awards for outstanding achievement for: London Underground Astronomical Observers – more than 10,000 people took part in the survey, asking who their favourite London Underground stations were and why. More than 150 stations are being shortlisted for the top 10s, with all the top stations receiving a special 'tube' badge and a special London Underground logo. The monthly Top Track award that recognises the best station/s – including underground, DLR and Overground/Trains – each month for the Local Transport Authority areas. Such tests may be performed to verify that the wireless telephone devices have been correctly manufactured, that they have been provided with sufficient memory, that they are provided with necessary software and that they perform their intended functions. In some cases, the wireless telephone devices are tested to ensure that they correctly operate with a different wireless telephone service or with another particular wireless telephone system, such as the Cellular Mobile Telephone (CMTS) wireless telephone system. In some conventional approaches, wireless telephone devices which are manufactured and tested in a factory environment are returned to a customer and sold with a tag having a telephone number which a customer may use to contact a technical support service. The support personnel may then test the wireless telephone device and communicate d41b202975

What's new in First Time In Paris:

I pulled into the small car park of the museum that houses Picasso's work, in the shadow of the Madeleine Cathedral at the Place du Palais. The City of Light was bright and warming, seeming like the precise place to begin my new collection of life, work and childhood memories. As I got out of my car, I shivered a little, then flagged down a taxi, giving the Hotel du Palais first time try as my first French address. My heart stopped as he was about to leave, so I waved him back. In my eagerness, and not knowing any French, I put down the amount he might have wagered on my behalf in dollars, remembering we were somewhere around the 5€ mark. Although my hair was styled perfectly, I felt ridiculous and out of place in my tailored outfit — a knee-length skirt and a button-down striped blouse — aloof and alone as a schoolgirl in front of a class of hundreds. The taxi driver didn't speak English, but I knew he could read and wrote the same way I read and wrote my name, and he pulled up to the front of the hotel, looking a bit confused by my sudden request. "Non, merci, je ne fais pas de généralisation," I said, "Just the front desk please." He gave a quick smile, signaled for me to go ahead of him, and suddenly realized the puzzled American who had just taken a taxi right out of the subway station had become the CEO of the hotel. He gave an approving nod as I strode purposefully towards the concierge. He had my trunk key instantly and said, "I'll take you up right now." The elevator whisked me up to my fifth floor room as fast as if I had been traveling for many weeks, rather than the hour and a half I had taken to get there. Again, the taxi driver gave me a thumbs up as I opened my door, one foot still on the elevator steps, and dropped the coins in his taxi's meter. As an aside, I wondered if it might be considered rude to get into a taxi with 50 cents and not give the driver a tip. After all, I had just gone to the expense of a taxi, gas, and a hotel room. I shrugged it off and walked towards my room. A few minutes later, there was a knock at my door. My new French friend
