Dory is the story of the memorable, but forgetful sea creature Dory (voice of Ellen DeGeneres).Á . 132 U.S. 89 (1889) HARTFORD LIGHTING COMPANY v. AMERICAN BRANCH RAILROAD COMPANY. No. 121. Supreme Court of United States. Submitted December 5, 1888. Decided January 14, 1889. APPEAL FROM THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE DISTRICT OF CONNECTICUT. Mr. H.B. Eastman for appellant. Mr. Walter H. Smith and Mr. Wm. H. Wells for appellee. MR. JUSTICE MATTHEWS delivered the opinion of the court. This is a bill in equity, brought by the Hartford Light and Heat Company against the American Branch Railroad Company, to restrain the latter from taking over and using for its own purposes property which it had leased to the former, and to procure a decree awarding to the plaintiff the use and possession of the property so taken. The original decree was rendered in the same court, and in the same term, to which the appeal was taken, and was affirmed by the Circuit Court. *90 On the 6th of July, 1879, the Hartford Light and Heat Company, a corporation of Connecticut, the plaintiff, made a lease to the American Branch Railroad Company, a corporation of Vermont, of the latter's fixtures, property and equipment in and upon a house and lot of the former lying in the city of Hartford, in the county of Hartford, in the State of Connecticut, and adjoining the square. A portion of the property so leased was used and employed by the latter in its railroad business, and, subsequently, in January, 1881, while its lease was still in force, the American Branch Railroad Company sold and conveyed to the New York and Hartford Railroad Company, a corporation of New York, and the defendant in this suit, all of the property so used and employed in its railroad business, and also other property embraced in the lease, which it had not used and employed. The lease was let for a term of three years, after which it was "irrevocable from and after the expiration of said
