The world is being swallowed up by a hostile fungus. Famine and misery are rampant, and people are turning on one another out of desperation. You are one of the last surviving humans, and this is your destiny – to kill the enemy at its source. Rather than fight the fungus head-on with conventional warfare, you must instead use both human and fungal soldiers to infiltrate the fungus's home, move the fungus's brain into the body of the fungus's queen, and disable the queen. In order to do that, you must assemble a squad of human and fungal troops to take down the queen, including a gargantuan giant snail and the slumbering fungus-infected bodies of a dead sniper and a floating bomb. You must put all your strategy in motion, starting with the selection of your squad. Every second counts, and you must be careful to consider your potential options and all of their consequences before committing each move. What is The Game Mind Over Mushroom?: Hard to describe this game, suffice to say this is the true-to-classic-strategy-gaming experience of a side-scrolling play-by-the-books, one-life and one-path game. What makes Mind Over Mushroom different from similar games: There is no fighting in the mind over mushroom. Instead, you must infiltrate the fungus's brain, carrying out your mission in a thrilling series of tactical battles across the fungus's lair. How to play: Select where you want to go, by moving your cursor across the grid of the game board. You can select the characters you want to use (or play as any non-chosen character with 'Inherit moves from Chosen' selected) and then click where you want them to move. You can select any characters you want to carry out special abilities. Play as many characters as you want (no characters are subject to death). When you are ready to move, move all your characters to a destination. It is possible to move your characters to any position on the game board. If you want a character to fight another character, either select them in the 'Actions' menu (when you want to select them) and then drag your cursor over their position on the board, or click where you want to attack and when you click, they attack the selected character. Each game board has a point value, these are made to be achieved by moving units onto enemy positions.

What's new in Stones Keeper: King Aurelius:

: Mage - Kaya Kalderon II Grimoire: Manastorm - Fire Class: Mage - Also, while we're on the subject, was Dark Souls' Yellowgorge 2-4-2 more confusing than making me go all Julie Kent on it and choke on some dark green? Aeolia Once again, we have many mages signing up to participate. The Mage is a very different and yet still very rewarding class in Blackguards. This class has the ability to do good in all four elements, and we'd love for you to contribute. The way this class works is much different from the sorcerer and evoker classes as well as other related classes and spells. Most of the spells for Mages are of the "support" variety, relying on casters to also cast things. The casters range from fireball, iciest, protection, healing, or whatever as appropriate for the situation. There are however a few spells where mages can truly be effective on their own. Stone of Summer is a skill that mage even have. The mage comes into combat with a blessed sign that allows them to place a timed (you set it) buff on all nearby enemies. Any enemies knocked back or dying are healed by the caster for a few turns. This isn't on it's own a very useful spell, but a mage usually has a couple and can control them with the duration of the first. Sand Storm is another targeted ability. Basically the caster can with good casting rolls and timing cause a sandstorm. Stacks of dust fall from the sky, automatically attacking enemies who go near them. The sandstorm lasts a few turns and can be used tactically. This is a pretty useful targeted ability, but honestly rarely seeing it used is a sign that you've done your homework. It doesn't work great on it's own, but by stacking buffs it can really be effective. The Repentant Magus supports spells with Coiled Shadow. This is a simple spell that causes a slow moving ring, around the mage, to come into existence. It can essentially trap an enemy, making them unable to move for the duration, and ideally creating a zone where enemies have to fight when they activate. This one is very simple, but it can be devastatingly effective for any defence class that relies on mobility. It's that time of the day again! We had some great questions from our YouTube

community and we decided to

This pack of 8 battle maps for Fantasy Grounds is for use with Fantasy Grounds and the J!-2G battle system: Cobblestone City (great for Ambushes, Guns, Evade, Roof-top Getaways) We can fit in many weapons, Avatars, Passengers, Store Items (and more) and characters (minions and maunts) in these maps without having to make several maps in different sizes. If your using Fantasy Grounds to make your own Ambushes and combinations with other players, then this pack of maps is for you! 1 User Reviews: "This awesome BattleMap pack is a perfect addition to your game! Many townspaces, commercial districts, and some houses to make your world a beautiful place! This is a must for all BGs erer. My favorite Map with this set is the "Fireside Inn" Map. It has 50+ scenes, a tavern, a bandit lord street, and so much more! Its a great plus for this pack that if your using it, there's nothing you could need it for! You can create the most beautiful BattleMaps with this set by creating your own food and drinks with this beautiful town! I highly recommend buying this pack, its worth it! "Michael S. Create fantasy worlds in minutes! Are you looking for a map that you can click and get right into a fantasy, or a great terrain to build your map around? Look no further! No need to spend hours making the perfect grass or twigs, this pack has you covered! The maps in this pack are perfect for the BattleGrounds battle system but can also be used to great effect in countless other games, such as the Pathfinder RPG system. The maps are made from real photos taken in the European countryside. The layers have been created in a game-making program and exported as high quality Photoshop files. Which means you have a map with the perfect resolution and with a clean bright look. Do not be fooled by the map download, this pack comes in a high quality PNG file format.
