I need to have this line always in the output of the script but I'm not sure how to do that. The only way I can think of doing that is using another command and somehow feeding the output into the script, but I'm not sure how to do that. A: This is what sed for the rescue! sed -e's/\(.\).\(pgpkeyvalue\)\(.\)/\1\2\3/' ./multi.txt | /data/firefox/Scripts/fetch.php If you open multi.txt in your favourite editor (I prefer vi), you can easily verify that this does what you want it to do (just remove \3 from each line). The intramural cervical epithelium contains a novel T-cell population. The thymus of the human fetus arises from the intramural part of the pharyngeal endoderm. In contrast, the fetal thymus of mammals other than man is postero-medially located in the dermomyotome of the neural tube and is derived from epiblast. We have studied the localization and differentiation of T-lymphocyte precursors in the pharyngeal endoderm of human and rat fetuses from the earliest stages of gestation up to birth by application of lineage-specific monoclonal antibodies and laser microdissection. In the human, endoderm from the intramural part of the pharyngeal region of the gut tube contains a subset of lymphocyte precursors that only weakly express Helper-T-cell differentiation antigens. The localization of these cells is similar to that of dendritic epidermal T cells and of thymocytes. Cells strongly expressing cytotoxic T-cell differentiation antigens are not present in the endoderm. CD45+ and CD4+ but not CD8+ precursor lymphocytes are localized in the thymus, although the proportion of positive cells is low at all stages of gestation studied. By application of this technique to human fetuses and neonates we demonstrate that intramural lymphocytes are present in the thymus until 4-5 years of age when their thymic involution is well established. Our findings show that the intramural cervical epithelium contains a novel type of T-lymphocyte precursor which is distinct from the conventional dendritic epider

The iconic AVERALL was revolutionised by two key new features - an all-digital, pitch-selective tonearm with a mechanical panpot arm positioner and the use of twin phono cartridges. With the turntable's glass platter rotated at 33, 45 and 78rpm, it can easily be switched between record and CD speeds. The MD330 was the industry's first to feature "digital turntable technology". The turntable uses Sony's pioneering MEMS (micro electro-mechanical system) rotary motion detector and motor system to accurately reproduce the sound coming from the vinyl. The result of a secret R&D project dating back to 1962, the MD330 was designed to perform even in modest conditions. The beautifully-crafted first model with their distinctive "Candy Apple Red" finish was manufactured in Tokyo and was first available from Sony's Japanese dealer chain, Toyo Kogyo. Following the huge success of the MD330 in Japan, the AVERALL range has d0c515b9f4
