Cytochrome P450 and P-glycoprotein (P-gp) are membrane proteins implicated in the absorption of drugs. The possibility of a significant effect of these proteins on oral drug absorption when they are co-administered with other drugs is a new and interesting issue. This study has been designed to evaluate the effect of co-administration of two drugs that interact with MDR1 and MRP1. A two-way crossover study was conducted in twelve subjects to evaluate the effect of carbamazepine or quinidine as a single or co-administered drug on oral bioavailability of digoxin, which is a substrate for MDR1 and MRP1. Serum levels of digoxin were measured using a HPLC method. The

The painting depicts three Pan-American leaders, Jose de San Martín, Simón Bolívar and José Miguel Carrera, embracing in a victory celebration. The painting was made by Rivera as a gift for Mexican president Lázaro Cárdenas, in the city of San Luis Potosí in 1920. The painting is in the collection of the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. Although it was technically a gift, Rivera included in his letter conveying the gift that he hoped it was "received with the dignity reserved for Mexico's gift from the Guadalupe image." The painting was lent to the United States by Mexico in 1988 as a gift from President Miguel de la Madrid.
