through and adding various people to it (employees, former employees, etc.). This will also be a great way for me to communicate with you all on what's going on. It is an important tool that we need to be using. Thanks in advance for your help. KimatNow here's a development that will not surprise you. Finally, the long-overdue Addison Road Safe Routes to School program in Northport is coming to fruition. [Sign up for our newsletter, "For the Record," to get all this and more delivered to your inbox.] "I'm ready," said Nathaniel Bunkley, a 12-year-old elementary school student at Pratt Street School. "I'm excited." Pratt Street, a magnet school serving the city's rising white middle-class African American population, is the first of four schools to get permits to sell or smoke marijuana for medical or recreational use. The school, which started out as a historically black school, is part of a changing demographic that has resulted in one of the highest concentrations of marijuana stores in the United States. But that change is under review. The state Board of Education is looking at the effects of unbridled growth of the medical and recreational marijuana businesses in the city in its annual, yearlong report. The board's d41b202975

TutorialThe first phase of Iowa's $1 billion 'Iowa Ag Experience' opens this week The first phase of Iowa's $1 billion "Iowa Ag Experience" will open its doors to the public this week, in a bid to boost tourism in the state. The Iowa Museum of Natural History and the Iowa State Historical Society are co-hosting "Iowa Ag Experience" at the Iowa State Fairgrounds this year. The museum and historical society partnered with the Iowa Department of Economic Development in 2010 to bring this multimedia exhibit to the fairgrounds. This year, it will be expanded from three to seven exhibits. While the main experience will be the museum's 150-foot-long exhibit, the state historical society will be hosting a second experience. This will be the first time "Evergreen Girl," the full-scale replica of an 18th-century Shaker community, has been on the fairgrounds. It was originally displayed in a Des Moines museum. The state historical society will also hold a special ceremony on Saturday morning where a horse drawn wagon will be reenacting a voyage from one of the many towns the Shakers created in the state. Formalin-induced secondary hyperalgesia and pain in the healthy human hand. The traditional paradigm for acute pain describes pain as a rapidly developing, initial phase, followed by an attenuating or tolerable phase. However, many reports suggest that patients can experience longer-lasting pain after surgical procedures. In this study, primary hyperalgesia, temporal summation of the induced sensation, and attenuation of the hyperalgesia were examined in patients with a history of pain following a 3- to 4-week formalin-injected hand, compared to patients with a history of pain following a placebo injection. In patients with pain following formalin injections, both mechanical and thermal hyperalgesia were significantly longer than those found in the placebo group, but there was no difference in temporal summation between the formalin and the placebo groups.
