I met Lori a few years ago when she was one of the first people to try out a version of Beautycopter called "Blingcopter" back in 2012. She was also the one who suggested we change the name of the game to Beautycopter and post the demo to itch.io. Even though we started with a 3D version of Beautycopter - then called Blingcopter - and even though a lot of the mechanics of this game were inspired by the original Blingcopter (the guest list, the flight model and the different locations) I didn't think I could match the charm of Lori's original version. I started to think about ways I could make a game with more depth and a greater appeal for a wider audience, mostly because some people were clearly finding the Blingcopter demo to be a bit frustrating. Then I thought: "why not take the same mechanics, put in some new things and call it Beautycopter?" That's how we got here. A: Try my boardgame. It's called Beautycopter I had a lot of fun creating this game and I'd be glad if you did as well. Go to itch.io, click the "Browse games" link at the top right corner, choose the game, and you should see a new page with the game's download and installation instructions. When you get to the install page, select "I have steam", and you should be all set. The man, surnamed Choi, appeared in court in Seoul on Thursday to face charges of murder, attempted murder, and inflicting injury with a whip, and will be detained for 20 days while the investigation takes place. Choi said he, his wife and her husband went out for drinks on Tuesday evening. They later returned home and sat drinking in the house. "I asked my wife to come to bed to make love with me because I felt thirsty," Choi was quoted as telling

Take-no-ya is a mysterious and powerful clan that lives on the bottom of the ocean. In this clan, one has the power to become a mindless orc (Mai). You go through the story of the life of Mai as she must fight her way through the streets of Kazamaki to save the life of her one-eyed lover, Kureha. The Story: In the town of Kazamaki, where the sea meets the land, live a bunch of people who are drowning in their daily life. It is a town where there is never too much daylight, and no one ever feels at peace. Furthermore, there is one special girl, Mai, who has a serious but unnoticeable problem: The One-Eyed Witch of the Sea. Mai has her right eye, which she needs for her magic, covered up by her left eye, which the witch uses to control her (Mai is the only one in the whole world that has the power to become a completely mindless orc). If she looks at the left side of her face, she is under the complete control of the witch, and her life will be over. The Story you are about to experience is set after Mai's last day at school. She spends that day trying to figure out what has happened to her, and to Kureha, who she promised to protect, while all the time being under the control of the witch. However, for Mai, the adventure is just beginning. Because, as she discovers, Kureha is not in Kazamaki, but somewhere in the darkness of the sea. To save Kureha, Mai must fight her way through the streets of Kazamaki, which puts her under the control of as many sadistic humans as she may encounter. Violence: Mai and Kureha are both in real danger at almost all times, and in order to save them, sometimes they will be forced to fight someone with their bare hands, or even in more gruesome ways, like biting them, ripping off their face, pulling their eyes out, and so on. Interactions: There is a small amount of interactivity possible in the game. There will be a few cutscenes which allow you to help Mai as she plays as the one who is able to not only see the future of the people in the video, but the future of the world, and maybe even stop the witch's plans. For example, in one of the cutscenes, there is a c9d1549cdd

Stuff about the Forums: by me Allow me to introduce myself, I am Alexander Braungardt. I live in the Humboldt county and am now an owner of the FuBar gaming shop. FuBar is both a small clothing shop and gaming store in Eureka Ca. I opened up this shop with a friend as a way of getting our game on and introduce people to games and hope it grows into something bigger. I came across Ultima Wiki a few months back. There are so many good topics on there that I couldn't help but get involved. It is a true treasure trove of information. For some reason I found myself talking to a bunch of the people on here, and now I'm not sure how or why. Maybe it was the gaming community or maybe it was the skills I gained from the wiki itself. Anyway, I decided to stay in touch and now I post here, read other topics and post questions and answers. Thank you for making this place what it is and for making it a community. You guys are my heroes. My name is Thad, I live in Montana with my family. I have been gaming for many years as a kid and a kid at heart. Most of my gaming began with Nintendo and then the SNES and the Genesis. I really enjoyed my Nintendo's, but I always had my SNES because I didn't know anything about the Genesis. As the years went by I got to know a lot more about the Genesis as well. I always played games that were on both of them and some others and really learned a lot. From the time I started to play games on the SNES my gaming experience was really born. I have been in a bunch of games and have had my fair share of life long friendships. One thing I love about the SNES is that I am not alone. There is so many other people playing their SNES too. It is great to get together with other people with this same interest and play games together. There are other great features of the SNES as well. I love how the SNES has so many different emulators on the internet. Even though many people play games on their SNES on their computer or on their computer with a PS3, I like the fact that you can play those games on your SNES or on the internet through the browser. I also love the way the SNES works. The SNES has a simple operating

D: A New Sport for the Future As extreme, free-form forms of sports such as skateboarding, surfing, snowboarding, and base-jumping, begin to receive mainstream and widespread recognition, another offshoot of skateboarding has begun to emerge: Parkour. As a branch of the urban art movement, Parkour has been created by extreme athletes and enthusiasts over the past few decades. The crossover of Parkour movements from artistic expression to competitive sport is proving to be a boon for the sport, and it is gaining notoriety in an ever-changing society. Mr. Parkour 3D is a new form of Parkour for the 21st century. Traditional Parkour, or the practice of quickly moving from one point to another as smoothly and quickly as possible without the use of gravity, started as an artistic expression of a demanding aesthetic of the 1980s. Its creator, Alexandre Martinez Vitez, worked in an Italian-style park and found that his works were becoming a design component in the city. He began to sneak up to fountains, climbing on statues, and running on and off rooftops. Vitez was blending his art and himself into one urban explorer, living for the moment and for freedom. Vitez eventually began to travel to France and to George Poulin's climbing school Ocampo, who taught him via the use of video and other instructional visual aids the art of Parkour. Poulin is still one of Parkour's biggest guiding influences in the United States. At that time, the only idea of how to train and build the skills of Parkour, aside from understanding the whole art/athletics/philosophy process of Parkour, was to simply jump off something, every day for a year. Over the course of time, as Vitez's reputation began to grow, he began to teach other students from his school, which eventually evolved into the first Parkour classes in the United States. Vitez and Poulin started a world of popularity for Parkour, and those who reach a certain level of skill in training do not necessarily practice the full stretches of traditional Parkour. Vitez and Poulin began to teach the style of Parkour we know today, Parkour with a defined set of more commonly trained moves. It was in this light that a natural evolution of the sport began. Vitez has been the one who has transitioned the elements of
