Evening Dress Code: Mr. Elvis wanted us to wear something sexy but no one could understand why. We were told that we could wear jeans. We accepted, as denim is perfect for evening. Not only were we covered in body paint, but anyone who got close to us could have seen our backs. This happens with body paint ALL the time. I've had parents text me hours after, asking me why we have a tattoo on my back and "who is that guy?". Don't worry, there's a funny story behind it, and I'm working on a post for that. Just wondering, does the tattoo hurt any more than an ordinary tattoo? If it does, does it bleed? Is it a normal amount of pain? _____ Quote: "It's not about the destination, it's about the journey." — Jason F. Miller I had a tattoo with a happy hippo on my back for my one year wedding anniversary. It's not a "tough job" or anything to get one. My tattooist did the whole thing in under an hour (they use pre-screened needles for the needle-less tattoo machines) and it looked great. It hurt for about a week and after that it was fine. Now, I don't recommend doing any permanent body art on your wedding
