We describe in this report the cerebral alterations observed in 36 subjects submitted to a hypoxic stimulus (hypobaric hypoxia) using three-dimensional time-of-flight (TOF) and two-dimensional (2D) gradient-recalled echo (GRE) MR imaging techniques. Two sets of images were obtained pre- and posthypoxia: 3D TOF and 2D GRE before and after three minutes of a 250 ml oxygen administration. Using a blind reading of the data obtained, we noticed that the hypoxia induced cerebral alterations in all the cases; the changes observed varied from mild (marginal areas of the brain) to severe (involving the entire hemisphere); but the appearance of the alterations varied among the cases. These results are in agreement with the existing literature that demonstrates the existence of hypoxia-induced alterations in the brain. We conclude that hypoxic susceptibility requires an analysis of the evolution of the cerebral changes using sophisticated imaging techniques.using System; using System.Collections.Generic; using System.Linq; using System.Text; using System.Threading.Tasks; using Windows.ApplicationModel; using Windows.ApplicationModel.Activation; using Windows.UI.Xaml; using Windows.UI.Xaml.Controls; using Windows.UI.Xaml.Navigation; namespace ToDoList { sealed partial class App : Application { /// Provides application-specific behavior
