What happens if I pass NULL as the first parameter of bind() function? What happens if its the last parameter of execv()? A: bind(3) man 3 bind The second argument to bind() is a pointer to a linked list of name-to-address mappings. The first element of the list, identified by the address indicated by the first argument, is bound to the first argument, and the remaining elements are bound in turn to the addresses returned by the first sublist as follows: ... As far as I know the process in which you send NULL for the first argument to execv is the same as the process in which you send NULL to bind. Therefore execv will not see any mapping at all. The F0-F1 V6 is a new full-range "vintage" tube guitar amp with a format that is both easy to use and to understand in terms of its function. It brings back the sound of the classic tube amps of the early 1960's and works by applying authentic circuit designs instead of modeling circuit designs that do not reproduce the sound of the original tube amplifiers. It uses a four-channel (F0, F1, F2, and F3) head with separate volume and tone controls. The models can be selected from over 15 different circuit and sound variations that are manually
