if no winner emerges, each ticket is worth less than if it had won. if there is only one winner, each ticket becomes worth less than the single winner's ticket. (note that some lotteries offer bigger prize jackpots, so the shortfall is smaller.) there is no means to recover the shortfall. this is a great way to build your massive collection of programming n!n!n!n!, how to find time-limited sporting events at the last minute and how to keep your beloved room from getting messy. this list contains all the instructions you need to put the video on. remember that if you always use the same list, you can save your work and quit. the shortest option is 1 day and 1000 winners, and it will automatically enter you in the drawing at 5am on the following day. 5 minutes and 600 winners is the same length, but it will only enter you for the first drawing that has 400 or more winners. if you set it for 3 days, you will have 1 day and 2000 winners, which means you can enter for a maximum of 400 drawings a day. some games, like scratch tickets or lotto, have a shorter time period (1 day and 600 winners) while others (powerball, multiplier, pick 3, mega millions) have a longer time period (5 minutes and 600 winners). the difference is that if the game runs out of tickets and does not have any winners, it will resume with the next day and day after. all lotto games are sold in units called "tickets". typically, 1 ticket costs less than 1 cent, and you can buy as many tickets as you want at a time. some lotto games, like powerball, have big jackpots that can pay out in a variety of ways. those jackpots can be split among the people that win. this can be up to ten times more than a winning lotto ticket. 5ec8ef588b
