TRF1 is a mammalian telomere-associated protein which binds to double-stranded telomere DNA. The human TRF1 also binds to the 5' untranslated region of several mRNAs that are involved in trans-acting regulatory functions in the cytoplasm. Here we report the 2.2 Å crystal structure of the RNA-binding domain (RBD) of the human TRF1 protein (hTRF1) in complex with a 5'-CCCAA-3' sequence from the 3'-untranslated region of the c-myc mRNA. hTRF1 recognizes two central G-quartets through two surface-exposed aromatic side chains, F47 and F49. The structure reveals that the G-quartet-binding pocket of hTRF1 shares a similar geometry as that of the viral decapping RNA and angiogenin ribonuclease, although hTRF1 can bind its RNA substrates at a higher DNA-to-ligand ratio.)(1) and (2) that will provide a more liquid and diversified basis of capital to meet future needs." [1] Before the Supreme Court, counsel suggested that the successor's rights could be extended to the widow, who had not written down her claim and, having lived in Florida from 1943 to 1972 with her husband, had no interest in his West Coast estate. The Court said "We are not required by 26 U. S. C. § 2033 to depart from the settled rule that only the executor or administrator has standing to sue. Although the case was argued on the assumption that the widow may be allowed to contest the will, we have found no statute in a situation such as the one here involving property in a foreign State. We would have to interpret the statute more broadly to avoid an apparent incongruity between it and the general rule recognized by the statute, to wit, that only the executor or administrator has standing to sue. (Cf. Rochester Savings Bank v. Rasquin (1939), 313 US. 252; Harrison v. Chamberlain (1920), 271 US. 52.)" 392 U. S. 66, 71. [2] See n. 79a2804d6b
