What is the movie about?

From Dusk Till Dawn 3: The Hangman's Daughter is a horror western film directed by P.J. Pesce and written by Álvaro Rodríguez and Robert Rodriguez. It serves as a prequel to From Dusk Till Dawn, revealing the origin story of Santánico Pandemonium, the vampire queen played by Salma Hayek in the original film.

The movie is set in Mexico in 1913, where American author Ambrose Bierce (Michael Parks) joins a stagecoach transporting a newlywed couple, John (Lennie Loftin) and Mary Newlie (Rebecca Gayheart), who are traveling to Mexico to preach Christianity. Meanwhile, Johnny Madrid (Marco Leonardi), a dangerous local outlaw, escapes from the gallows and kidnaps his hangman Mauricio's (Temuera Morrison) beautiful daughter Esmeralda (Ara Celi). Madrid receives assistance from Catherine Reece (Jordana Spiro), a young woman who wants to become Madrid's apprentice as an outlaw.

As night falls, all parties coincidentally seek shelter in an isolated inn called La Tetilla Del Diablo (the Titty Twister from the first film) that also serves as a brothel. They meet Ezra Traylor (Orlando Jones), a businessman heading to the U.S. Mauricio is the only one who knows that a group of vampires run the establishment, led by the high priestess Quixtla (Sonia Braga), who is immediately drawn to Esmeralda.
